

This website <https://html5up.net/directive> was hosted Using github pages. Whole process is described below

1. An empty repo with just readme.md was created in the remote
2. The source code of the static web site was downloaded into local
3. Remote repo was cloned into the local system
4. Then multiple branches were created from master based on the project files which are Assets, Images, html, text
5. Then the branch was switched to Assets & Assets directory was copied. Then files were added using `git add .` command & committed using `git commit -m "###"` command. Then the branch was pushed into remote repo using `git push origin assets` command
6. Then branch was switched to Images, html, text respectively & files were added, committed & pushed liked the process described in no 5 in each cases.
7. Later pull requests were created into master from all the branches
8. To keep the commit history linear the PR were rebased & merged into master One by One & in each cases branches were deleted after rebase
9. Here is the screenshots of the all the branch's commit history
